About

I am a versatile creative working at the intersection of art direction, visual communication design, photography, video and organic materials, with a deep passion for exploring these fields and for crafting a unique vision that brings together their diverse nuances.

I operate on the boundary between designer and artist, and it is there that my work finds its meaning. I do not seek to resolve the contrast, but to translate it into functional visual forms. My approach begins with listening and research: when I enter a new context—be it a culture, a discipline or a field seemingly distant from design—I work to extract its meanings. I see connections where none have yet been drawn, and I am drawn to everything I have not yet explored.

Interdisciplinarity is at the heart of my creative vision, and with it comes the opportunity to push boundaries and contribute to projects that give rise, together, to authentic and functional artefacts. I work with rigour and courage; I believe in design as an act of translation and in the continuous evolution across disciplines, languages and different worlds.
